

Book Launch and Panel Discussion

Transforming Societies After Political Violence Truth, Reconciliation, and Mental Health

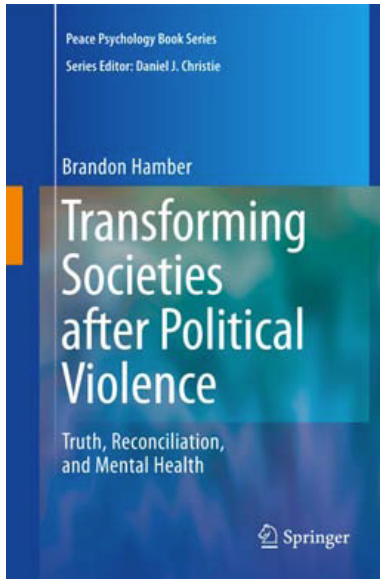

Columbia University
MAILMAN SCHOOL
OF PUBLIC HEALTH
PROGRAM ON FORCED MIGRATION AND HEALTH
HEILBRUNN DEPARTMENT OF POPULATION AND FAMILY HEALTH center for the study of CS

HR
human rights

INCORE
international conflict research institute

University of ULSTER

INTERNATIONAL
TRAUMASTUDIES
PROGRAM

2009. VIII, 249 p. 2 illus.
(Peace Psychology Book Series) Hardcover
ISBN 978-0-387-89426

To mark the launch of Professor Brandon Hamber's new book Transforming Societies After Political Violence: Truth, Reconciliation, and Mental Health (Springer, 2009) the Program on Forced Migration and Health, the Center for the Study of Human Rights, the International Trauma Studies Program and INCORE are hosting a panel discussion exploring the role of mental health in transitional justice processes.

Date: 11 November 2009
Time: 4-6pm
Venue: International Affairs Building, Room 801
420 W. 118th Street, New York

RSVP: info@itspnyc.org or call 212.889.8117

Sponsors

Program on Forced Migration and Health
Mailman School of Public Health
Columbia University

Center for the Study of Human Rights
Columbia University

International Trauma Studies Program

INCORE
International Conflict Research Institute
University of Ulster

"With plentiful, poignant stories, and clear policy recommendations, this book should help shape – and greatly improve – future endeavors to confront unimaginable memories and pain (Priscilla Hayner, ICTJ and author of Unspeakable Truths)

Panel

Presenter:

Brandon Hamber

Professor of Peace and Conflict Studies (University of Ulster, Northern Ireland)
Director of the International Conflict Research Institute (INCORE)

Respondents:

Ruti Teitel

Ernst C. Stiefel Professor of Comparative Law at New York Law School

Graeme Simpson

Director, Thematic Programs, International Centre for Transitional Justice (ICTJ)

Alastair Ager

Professor of Clinical Population & Family Health (Mailman School of Public Health)

Moderator:

Jack Saul

Assistant Professor of Clinical Population and Family Health (Mailman School of Public Health) and Director of the International Trauma Studies Program