Graeme Simpson has a law degree (LLB) and a Masters degree in History from the University of the Witwatersrand, South Africa. He was a co-founder (1989) and Executive Director of the Centre for the Study of Violence and Reconciliation (CSVR), in Johannesburg, South Africa, until April 2005. In 2005, he was appointed as the Director of Country Programs at the International Center for Transitional Justice (ICTJ), headquartered in New York City and in that capacity oversaw the organization's work in more than twenty five countries around the globe. Thereafter, he was the Director of Thematic Programs at the ICTJ for two further years, and oversaw work on Prosecutions, Reparations, Truth-Seeking, Security System Reform, Memorials, Gender, and a program on Peace & Justice. At the beginning of January 2011, Graeme Simpson joined Interpeace, as Director of Policy and Learning and he is also the Director of Interpeace USA. Interpeace is a global peace-building organization headquartered in Geneva and working in 15 conflict and immediate post-conflict zones around the world for the past decade and a half.
